ALL THE HIGH OFFICIALS PRESENT.

For the Hero of Manila Bay It Was a Trying as Well as a Triumphal Day.

The Strain Upon Adm. Dewey Reached Al most to the Breaking Point-As He Received the Sword He Brushed Away the Tears From His Eyes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 .- The culmina tion of Adm. Dewey's triumphal home coming was reached Tuesday in the shadow of the dome of the nationa capitol. Here he received from the hands of the president the magniticent jeweled sword voted him by con gress in commemoration of the victor of Manila bay. This was the officia reason for the ceremony. But more official sanction could never havthrown into the demonstration the fervor of enthusiasm that was meter out to the admiral as he appeared before the vast audience, compose not only of all the higheofficials in the land, but of spectator. drawn from every quarter of the United States. The battle of Manil: bay was not forgotten, but it might be said to have been relegated almost to second place in the desire to do hono; to the man who had proved himself a great after victory as before it, and who had shown in the long and tryin months that followed his naval tri umph the qualities of a statesman and a wise administrator, as well as thosof the fighting leader of a victorioufleet.

And enhancing these qualities wa that of manly modesty, displayed in the quiet dignity with which he me the occasion. This .trait of Dewey' character was evidenced from the me ment he reached the stand side by sid with the president. He paused at the point for a moment unwilling, ar parently, to take the place that has been prepared for him on the right o the platform lest he should at pear to usurp the place du to the chief magistrate. Presiden McKinley grasped the situation in a: instant, and taking his great sea cay tain by the arm, placed him by gentl force in that chair that had been in tended for him. Later in the day, a the carriages bearing the official party drove away from the capitol, between walls of cheering people, the presiden again displayed his tact by remaining covered and ignoring the demonstration himself, leaving its acknowledgments to the admiral alone For Dewey it was a trying as well as a triumphal day. It has been given to few officers in the naval history of the country to sit before a crowd of thousands while the chief of the naval establishments dilated upon their exploits, and then to stand be fore the same crowd to receive at the hands of the president a sword prepared for him at the behalf of the representatives of the whole people. The strain upon Adm. Dewey reached almost to the breaking point. None but those nearest to him could see how he labored to repress his feelings during the address of Secretary Long, but when he arose to receive the sword from the hands of the president no one could mistake the flash of the white gloved hand as it rose to dasi away the tears before the admira came to the rigid attitude of attention before his chief.

When it became Dewey's turn to reply his voice failed him and he made the effort twice before his lips would respond. When he did succeed his tones were clear and steady, but so low that only those nearest him could

One of the most remarkable features of the eventful day was the ovation to Rr. Adm. Schley on the return of the party from the capitol to the white house. His carriage was several numbers behind that of the president and Adm. Dewey and received an ovation that could be scarely ranked below that accorded to the admiral himself. The tumult grew as the carriage pro ceeded down the avenue and the crowd surged around it till the horses were brought to a footpace. Finally a company of the high school cade s came to the rescue and formed about the carriage in a hollow square. Thus protected and flanked by a force of police the carriage reached the white house with a long gap between it and the next official guests.

Out of the store of his experience the president was able to give Adm. Dewey one valuable suggestion before leaving the capitol. The venerable Cardinal Gibbons was presented and after an exchange of greetings the president asked the admiral if he felt equal to a general ordeal of handshaking. The hero of Manila swerved from the shock, explaining that his right arm was partially paralyzed from his experience in New York.

"Let me suggest to you," said the president, "hereafter you shake the other man's hand, don't let him shake your's You save yourself by not letting them get the grasp on you."

NOT ENOUGH WIND.

The First Yacht Race Between the Colum bla and Shamrock For the American, Cup Declared Off.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.-As the sun set, a great ball of fire, behind the Navesink hills, and the sparkling stars came out into the flawless heavens, Tuesday evening, the biggest crowd of sightseers and yachtsmen who ever sailed down to Sandy Hook to witness the attempt of a foreign mug hunter to wrest from America the yachting supremacy | The Marines Sent by Adm. Watson of the world, returned to New York crestfallen and disappointed.

The winds from the caves of old ocean had proved too light and shifty, and the first of the international series of 1899, between the two greatest racing machines ever produced by England and America, degenerated into a drifting match and had to be declared off because neither could reach the finish line in the time allotted by the rules. Though indecisive in every respect, as to the abilities of the great rival single stickers, Tuesday's race indicates that the Irish boat, with her English skipper and her Scotch crew, is the ablest sloop ever sent across the Atlantic in the hope of lifting the one hundred guinea cup, which the Americans brought back forty-eight years ago, and which has since been successfully defended against the world.

During the five and a half hours sail the Shamrock was thrice ahead, and twice the Yankee boat showed the way. . For the first ten minutes the Shamrock led, then for five the Columbia's graceful bow showed ahead of the green boat; for 45 minutes following the Shamrock, then for three hours the Columbia, and for the last hour and a half it was the Shamrock that led the way.
